BURNS RESULT IN DEATH

Widow of General Withers Dies at Her Home in Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., (Special): Mrs. Martha Sharkey Withers, widow of the late General W. T. Withers and one of the wealthiest and most prominent women of Lexington, died at her home here after an illness of nearly two weeks from burns sustained when her clothing caught fire from an open gas grate. Mrs. Withers was eighty-six years old, and while her injuries were not in themselves serious, the shock proved fatal on account of her frail condition. Mrs. Withers was a native of Mississippi, where she was married to General Withers of the Confederate army. Soon after the war they moved to Lexington.

ASSESSMENT $43,408.687

Fayette County Shows $72,000 Increase For Year.

Lexington, Ky., (Special): The 1916 tax assessment of Fayette county shows an aggregate of $43,408,687, which is approximately $72,000 more than that for 1915.

The increase, according to county assessor John Bain, is due to the growth in the value of property and not higher assessment. The figures show property owned by negroes to be valued at $816,180, and the assessment placed on the Lexington banks is $2,334,258. The resignation of J. T. Tunis from the county Board of Equalization has been accepted by County Judge F. A. Bullock, and Ernest B. Ellis appointed to the place.

Horse Crushes Farmer.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., (Special): Samuel Stacey, a farmer of Fleming county, who had his leg broken several days ago, when his horse fell on him, is in a precarious condition at his home near Ryan in that county. After the accident Stacey mounted his horse and rode several miles before receiving medical treatment and the exposure has endangered his chances of recovery.

New College Gym Finished.

Danville, Ky., (Special): The new Center college gymnasium has been completed. This is the second gymnasium erected on the site in the past two years. The old one burned and in ten days after the first new one was erected it was destroyed by fire. Equipment has arrived and is being installed and the place will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks.

He Could Wield an Ax.

The skill of the old Maine shipbuilders in the use of the adz and broadax was wonderful. One old time yarn is of a carpenter who applied very drunk at a shipyard for employment. In order to have a little fun with him the foreman set him to give a proof of his skill by hewing out a wooden bolt with no chopping block but a stone. The carpenter accomplished his difficult task without marring the keen edge of the broadax and showed the foreman a neatly made bolt. Then he brought the ax down with a terrific blow that shattered its edge upon the stone. "I can hew fast rate on your chopping block," he hiccupped, "but I'll be blamed if I can make the ax stick in it when I get through." The story runs that the foreman lost no time in employing such a workman.

MIGHTY MOUNT RAINIER.

Beheaded by a Volcanic Explosion, it Still Towers Up 14,408 Feet.

Mount Rainier, in Washington, covers 100 square miles of territory and rises 14,408 feet into the air. In shape it is not a simple cone tapering to a slender, pointed summit like Fujiyama, the great volcano of Japan. It is rather a broadly truncated mass resembling an enormous tree stump with spreading base and irregularly broken top.

Its life history has been a varied one. Like all volcanoes, Rainier has built up its cone with the materials ejected by its own eruptions—with cinders and steam shredded particles and lumps of lava and with occasional flows of liquid lava that have solidified into layers of hard basaltic rock. At one time it attained an altitude of not less than 16,000 feet, if one may judge by the steep inclination of the lava and cinder layers visible in its flanks. Then followed a great explosion that destroyed the top part of the mountain and reduced its height by some 2,000 feet. The volcano was left beheaded, with a capacious hollow crater surrounded by a jagged rim.

Later on this great cavity, which measured nearly three miles across from south to north, was filled by two small cinder cones. Successive feeble eruptions added to their height until at last they formed together a low rounded dome—the eminence that now constitutes the mountain's summit. The higher portions of the old crater rim rise to elevations within a few hundred feet of the summit and, especially when viewed from below, stand out boldly as separate peaks that mask and seem to overshadow the central dome.

Cincinnati, Jan. 3.—The Ohio river at this point reached 49.9 feet and has been stationary since that time. This is one-tenth inch below flood stage, which the weather bureau says will not be reached. Very little damage has resulted from the high waters here.
